

Please use some common sense and keep the caps on media ownership. Allowing Rupert Murdoch (or anyone else for that matter) to own all my media outlets means that I'll get a far less diverse range of opinions than I already get. It's a fundamental requirement for our democracy that the media expose us to different points of view. If one mega-corporation, like Clear Channel, can own all the radio stations, TV stations, and newspapers in my market, then Democracy is as good as dead (and it's already on life support).